NEWS WORTH SHARING.

Fall from grace a 'living hell,' says ex-TDSB director

Interview. Plagiarism scandal drove Chris Spence from public life earlier this year

An emotionally broken Chris Spence came out of hiding Thursday to take responsibility for the plagiarism scandal that cut short his high-profile career, blaming his own ambition and frantic workload — and a reliance on the help of others.

In his first public statement since resigning in disgrace in January, the former director of education for the Toronto District School Board told the Torstar News Service, "There are no excuses for what I did; I didn't give credit where credit was due."

But along with his own carelessness, he also blamed the work of a number of assistants over many years for the unattributed material.

In a far-reaching interview, the 51-year-old father of two described his fall from the highest post in Canadian education as "soul-destroying" and a "living hell," and said he has felt like he was "drowning in depression."

Chris Spence

"It's been so difficult; to be stripped of your self-worth, your identity, your livelihood."

But Spence blamed his own "blind ambition" and relentless Type A drive that left him little time to write his own work.

"I'm not looking to point fingers, but did I write everything? Absolutely not. I had support ... as early as 1994," said Spence, who by then was a full-time teacher and grad student and writing scripts and books.

"When I look back at the blogs, the speeches, the presentations, I'm going to say that a large, large percentage, you had support to get some of that work done. But I recognize that I approved everything."

While he insisted he takes responsibility for the plagiarized passages found in opinion pieces, speeches and even his doctoral thesis from 1996 — still under investigation by the University of Toronto — he stopped short of admitting he ever knowingly stole someone else's words.

"I'm a fairly prolific reader, so sometimes I just read ideas that meshed with my own."

Food trucks coming to five Toronto parks

Pilot program. If it proves successful, it can run beyond the current Oct. 1 end date, city staff say

A loosening of the red tape wrapped around Toronto food trucks is on the way, at least for a couple of months.

The city will allow select food trucks to roam five parks over a two-month period, starting Aug. 1, as part of a pilot program. About 15 vendors will be allowed to set up their food trucks in Woodbine Park, Sherbourne Common, Roundhouse Park, Canoe Landing and Allen Gardens.

It's a small victory for those who have long pushed for Toronto to loosen its restrictive street-food bylaws.

Councillors Josh Colle and Mary-Margaret McMahon, who championed the project, launched it on Thursday afternoon in Nathan Phillips Square with food-truck lunches of fish tacos and arancini rice balls.

A successful pilot, they hope, will help create a vibrant street-food industry in Toronto. "We've been kind of pushing and prodding staff," Colle said. "Thankfully they've finally come around to doing this."

Currently, food trucks are restricted to private parking lots and events and are not allowed to sell on city property.

Since the flop of the Toronto a la Cart program, in which tight restrictions, high costs and bureaucratic bungling brought financial ruin to vendors, the city has been inching toward a solution.

Darcy Higgins, Food Forward executive director, said the pilot is a good first step.

"It is a great start of allowing diverse street food in Toronto," said Higgins, whose organization advocates for a broader variety of offerings on food trucks and carts. "We're glad to see something finally happen." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Holyday trashed for garbage-truck photo-op

Deputy Mayor Doug Holyday is ready to say sorry for using a garbage truck with the City of Toronto logo as a provincial campaign prop, but trashed Liberal candidate Peter Milczyn's official complaint as "petty."

"If that (logo use) is improper, I would certainly apologize for it," Holyday said on Thursday. "The truck didn't need to have the logo there to make the point" about his role in expanding privatized garbage collection, he said.

A day earlier, the Etobicoke-Lakeshore candidate, known at city hall as a stickler for rules, touted his record while standing in front of a city-contracted truck with Ontario PC Leader Tim Hudak.

The truck, with a large City of Toronto logo, was loaned to Holyday for the Wednesday event by Green For Life, whose chief executive, Patrick Dovigi, said: "The deputy mayor requested a truck so we supplied a truck. We weren't aware of the circumstances."

Council rules expressly forbid use of the Toronto logo or city resources for anything other than city business.

Milczyn said Thursday that he has asked the city's integrity commissioner to investigate "the potential misuse of city resources."

"For someone who claims to have respect for the office he is elected to, it surprises me that Mr. Holyday would leverage his position as deputy mayor to Rob Ford for partisan purposes," he said in a statement.

Polls say that, leading up to next Thursday's vote, the pair are locked in a tight race as the PCs hammer the Liberals over the power-plant scandal in a bid to finally win a Toronto seat. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Fallen Maple Leaf Forever tree to get a second life

Icon. The silver maple, said to inspire Alexander Muir's song about Canada, was felled by a storm last week, is set to be repurposed

Remains of the Maple Leaf Forever tree. CONTRIBUTED

The Maple Leaf Forever tree may have been toppled by last week's storm but it will live on — possibly as a bench, a museum artifact, or even the city council Speaker's gavel.

It seemed it was all over when a storm last week felled the historic silver maple said to have inspired Alexander Muir's The Maple Leaf Forever. But, since the storm, the city has been flooded with calls from residents, museums, historical societies and local artisans interested in repurposing the wood and honouring its history.

"It's absolutely fascinating, the number of inquiries we've gotten," said Rob McMonagle, senior adviser with the city's economic development and culture office, which is now in charge of the tree. "I would estimate we've had at least 50 to 100 inquiries from people."

The fallen maple will be moved indoors Friday. It's definitely not bound for the scrap yard now, but McMonagle said the city is evaluating how much wood was salvaged and how to best repurpose it.

Medicinal pot in public

When Marko Ivancicevic smokes a spliff in public, he does so where there are no children. But he doesn't have to.

In fact, when using his medicinal pot, the 32-year-old from Oshawa can legally light up pretty much anywhere, except a place that has a liquor licence, or where a property owner tells him he can't. Municipal and provincial anti-smoking laws don't mention it, while Health Canada simply recommends not to smoke it in public.

The absence of explicit medical-weed smoking regulations can leave users confused as to where they're allowed to smoke up. Now, in light of an incident in Montreal where a woman using marijuana to medicate a nerve disorder was kicked out of an amusement park, legal experts and pot advocates are calling for more definitive rules to clearly spell out where people are allowed to smoke medical marijuana.

"It's a systemic issue that really needs to be addressed," said Ivancicevic, a pot activist who smokes pot to alleviate pain from scoliosis, a club foot, and irritable bowel syndrome.

Drinking and driving. Husband responsible for fatal crash sentenced

Daniel and Marsha Lowery were high school sweethearts, married more than 30 years and the proud parents of twin daughters. The Mississauga couple was inseparable, until their lives were torn apart by drinking and driving. Thursday morning, the visibly broken and depressed Daniel Lowery stood before a Brampton judge to be sentenced for the alcohol-related crash that he caused.

"It is unlikely he will ever know even a morsel of life as it was before," Justice Katherine McLeod said.

Lowery, 56, using a cane to walk and looking much thinner than a few years ago, pleaded guilty to excess blood alcohol causing death and excess blood alcohol causing bodily harm earlier this year.

The judge sentenced him to 30 days in jail, to be served on weekends, and prohibited him from driving for the next seven years. Along with the physical injuries from the crash, Lowery suffered brain injuries that have affected him psychologically, court heard.

Behind the wheel

- Lowery was behind the wheel of a Ford Taurus when it lost control and was struck by another vehicle on Dec. 6, 2010. Marsha Lowery, 53, a passenger in the Taurus, was killed.
- Lowery had been drinking heavily when his wife asked if he could drive her to see her dad.

"He lost his wife, his high-school sweetheart and his will to live," Tania Lowery said of her father. "He's crying day to day and wondering why he's not with mom."

McLeod said psychological reports show Lowery feels guilty, suffers from a major depressive disorder and is self-loathing, "which is not surprising given his role in the crash."

Elliot Lake. Collapsed mall owner didn't want to pour money into 'black hole'

The owner of the crumbling Algo Centre Mall admitted Thursday he actually had the cash to fix the leaking roof but chose not to because it would have meant pouring money down the drain.

Testifying for a third day at the inquiry into the mall's deadly collapse, Bob Nazarian said he sold a property he owned in 2009, four years after he purchased the mall, then spent $2.6 million to buy another.

Why, commission counsel Peter Doody asked, didn't he instead put that money into fixing the roof?

"Because," Nazarian said.

"Because why?"

"The Algo Mall was a black hole. No matter how much money you put in ... that mall was doomed," Nazarian said.

The stunning admission came after days of testimony about how Nazarian had been desperate to finance repairs to the perennially leaking roof, which caved in last summer killing two women.

CULTURE CHANGE TAKES TIME BUT IT'S WELL UNDERWAY AT THE TTC

ANDY BYFORD
CEO
TORONTO TRANSIT COMMISSION

Our recently launched Five-Year Corporate Plan sets out how the TTC will transform every aspect of its operation.

This means upgrading equipment, modernizing processes and transforming the culture so that, in addition to a more reliable service, you, as a customer, feel valued and welcomed.

In recent weeks, customers have approached me and said that they have noticed a difference — that the subway is a bit cleaner, that information is more timely and useful and that staff seems more engaged.

It is very early days, but I credit TTC staff for this. We are making an all-out effort to up our game and to improve your service at a time when finances are tighter than ever.

True culture change takes time. I want the service to be consistently good and for excellent customer service to be a given. We are putting a lot of focus on changing management style to support and develop staff while encouraging them to be friendly and engaging. We are also strengthening management of front-line operations to make excellence the norm.

Ultimately, it is the reliability and punctuality of the service that is most important.

But we should also make you feel welcome and valued, hence the increased priority given to customer service.

I'd like to ask for your help: When your Operator greets you with a smile or thanks you, please do not hesitate to reciprocate. It goes a long way to encouraging all of us to up our game.

• The 504 King, 505 Dundas and 506 Carlton streetcars are now back to regular routing following a long two weeks for streetcar riders in the east end whose service was disrupted due to a major fire on July 14. TTC crews worked 24/7 to replace damaged overhead wires and return service to normal as quickly as possible. I want to thank you, our customers, for your patience over this period of time.

Premiers vow to fight jobs training scheme

Controversy. New plan would require provinces to cough up more than half a billion dollars

Canada's provincial and territorial leaders vowed Thursday to fight Ottawa's controversial plan to fund jobs training for workers, saying the new scheme would require them to come up with more than half a billion dollars in extra cash.

There's concern across the board over the Canada Job Grant, said Premier Kathleen Wynne, who is hosting the Council of the Federation meeting.

The Harper government wants to divert some of the money it gives to the provinces and territories to the new program, which would provide a grant of $15,000 per worker. The provinces and territories, as well as the employers, would each kick in $5,000.

But the premiers are worried that it won't give them enough flexibility to direct the money where it's needed most and could jeopardize existing provincially run programs. Small businesses aren't interested in taking part in this program either, Wynne said.

Premiers' response

"There really was a very strong feeling that the program as it exists won't work."

Can you guess who the dental assistant is?

Surprisingly, any one of these people could be a dental assistant. Yes – formally educated or not, anyone can become a dental assistant. That's the message the Ontario government sent to the province.

The Health Minister, the Honourable Deb Matthews, decided to accept the recommendation of the Health Professions Regulatory Advisory Council (HPRAC) not to regulate Ontario dental assistants.

With this decision, the Ontario government is stating that it is permissible for Ontario dentists to hire people without a formal education to do the work of dental assistants. That means anyone can be a dental assistant... your dentist's niece, the girl next door, or the guy at the check-out counter at the grocery store.

If that surprises you, consider this: dental assistants take x-rays and are responsible for infection control in the dental office. We believe that anyone with these responsibilities should have a formal education before performing these tasks. It is a matter of public health and safety.

Dental assistants are currently regulated in eight Canadian provinces and it appears that Quebec will soon follow. Ontario will be the only province that does not meet the national standards.

Our loss is a bigger loss for Ontario dental patients.

Help us send a message to the Ontario government. In the upcoming by-elections, make sure your vote supports a government that listens to frontline workers.

Please go online to sign our petition today! ODAA.org/change

Presents for a prince. Mukluks, blanket among Canadian gifts

It may be a while before Prince George pays a visit to Canada, but the country's future king already has plenty of symbolic homegrown mementoes.

On their official website, Prince William and his wife, Kate, expressed gratefulness for the gifts they've already received for their newborn son but suggest well-wishers instead support those in need, such as a local children's charity.

Canada appears to be heeding the call. Prime Minister Stephen Harper announced a donation by the government of $100,000 to a Canadian child-focused charity to be named at a later date.

The young prince could soon be swathed in a Canadian handcrafted blanket, an additional gift Harper said is "reflective of our country's rich and diverse culture."

Manitobah Mukluks, a gift from Shawn Atleo, national chief of the Assembly of First Nations. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fashioned from cream-coloured qiviut (muskox wool) with a white border, the Canadian coat of arms and Prince George's birthdate will be embroidered on the blanket, which is in the process of being made.

"These gifts symbolize our warm ties to our Royal Family, honouring our close and enduring relationship," Harper said in a statement Thursday.

Harper and his wife, Laureen, and Gov. Gen. David Johnston and his wife, Sharon, are also offering a personal present to the infant heir to the throne: a selection of Canadian children's books in both official languages.

Canada's police-reported crime rate falls again

Canada's police services are once again reporting fewer crimes, a continuing trend that has cut the national crime rate to its lowest level since 1972. Swedish politician accidentally posts revealing selfie

A Swedish politician who wanted to show his new tattoo to followers on a social media site accidentally revealed far more than he intended.

Ohly quickly removed the picture after posting it Wednesday on Instagram but couldn't stop the avalanche of comments in social media.

Ohly made light of the embarrassment and said he would be more careful when he posts online.

Virginia Johnson, the Missouri farm girl who helped redefine the understanding of human sexuality as half of the husband-wife team whose taboo sex studies in the 1960s turned them into worldwide celebrities and bestselling authors, has died. She was 88.

The pioneering sex researcher died at an assisted living facility in St. Louis on Wednesday after suffering complications from various illnesses, her son Scott Johnson told The Associated Press on Thursday. He said the family was planning a private funeral.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

If you took the quit smoking drug CHAMPIX between April 2, 2007 and May 31, 2010, your rights could be affected by the certification of a class action. Please read carefully.

The Ontario Superior court has certified a class action for Canadians who took Champix between April 2, 2007 and May 31, 2010 and allegedly suffered certain reactions. The Representative Plaintiff is Kenneth Parker.

What is the Class Action About?

The lawsuit seeks compensation for all class members. It alleges that, between April 2, 2007 and May 31, 2010, Pfizer Canada Inc. failed to adequately warn of the risk of certain psychiatric adverse events allegedly related to Champix.

Pfizer Canada Inc. denies the allegations, which have not been established, and is defending the lawsuit.

Who is Included in the Class Action?

All persons in Canada who took Champix during the period from April 2, 2007 to May 31, 2010 and who, while taking or after taking Champix to help quit smoking, experienced any of the psychiatric adverse events or symptoms listed below:

- thoughts about suicide or dying
- attempts to commit suicide
- new or worse depression, anxiety or panic attacks
- feeling very agitated or restless
- acting aggressive, being angry or violent
- acting on dangerous impulses
- an extreme increase in activity and talking (mania)
- abnormal thoughts or sensations
- seeing or hearing things that are not there (hallucinations)
- feeling people are against you (paranoia)
- feeling confused
- other unusual changes in behaviours

If you are a person who fits the above description, you are a member of the "Class". If you are a relative of a member of the Class who is entitled to make claims under any of the Dependants Statutes in Canada as a result of the death or personal injury of your relative, you are a member of the "Family Class".

If you are a Class member or Family Class member you do not need to do anything at this stage to participate – you are automatically included in the class action. You are encouraged however to contact Class Counsel for more information, and to discuss the steps necessary for preserving medical records that may be needed for any claim that may be advanced on your behalf.

You Must Opt-Out if You Do Not Want to Participate

If you do not want to be part of this lawsuit you must notify Class Counsel at the address below, in writing, by no latter than September 20, 2013, providing your name and address and indicating that you do not want to be part of this lawsuit.

If you are a Class member or a Family Class member and do not exclude yourself by that date you will be included in this lawsuit and will be forever bound by the court's judgment on the common issues, whether favourable or not.

What are the Financial Consequences?

If the action is not successful on the common issues, no class member will be responsible for legal fees or costs. The Representative Plaintiff has entered into a contingency fee agreement with Class Counsel for the legal work on the common issues. Class Counsel will be paid only if the action is successful.

If the class is successful at the common issues trial, further proceedings will be necessary for individual Class members to prove their own personal claims. Class members may be responsible for the costs of proving their own claims, and may wish to hire a lawyer to assist them with these further proceedings. Class Counsel is available to be hired by class members on a contingency basis, or class members may hire another lawyer of their own choosing.

Huma Abedin has long worked by Hillary Clinton's side, starting as a White House intern. Many have wondered why a successful, smart and stunning woman like Abedin would give all her love to Anthony Weiner.

Standing by her man once again, but why?

The Good Wife. Many wonder why Huma Abedin continues to support Anthony Weiner

When Huma Abedin first started getting media attention years ago, some people couldn't help but wonder what this beautiful, ambitious woman and former aide to Hilary Clinton saw in then-Congressman Anthony Weiner.

That's a question New Yorkers might be asking themselves again after revelations that Weiner, now a candidate for mayor of New York, didn't immediately give up his habit of exchanging sexual pictures and messages to female fans after his humiliating resignation from Congress in 2011.

Abedin herself took a shot at an answer in an awkward joint news conference, saying she had forgiven her husband and felt his marital indiscretions were "between us."

Will that be enough to satisfy a bewildered public? Maybe not. But people who go searching for a deeper motive are almost certain to get it wrong.

"None of us know what's going on with that couple now," said Stephen Medvic, an associate professor of government at Franklin & Marshall College in Pennsylvania and author of the book, In Defence of Politicians.

"She made a statement," he said. "Let's leave it at that."

Show the world you love him

Huma Abedin offered an even more basic explanation in a first-person essay in Harper's Bazaar due on newsstands in September.

"Quite simply, I love my husband, I love my city, and I believe in what he wants to do for the people of New York," she wrote.

Bulgaria. Officials release name, face of Canadian accused in bus bombing

Bulgarian authorities distributed on Thursday the names and images of two wanted suspects — one of them Canadian — involved in a bomb attack that killed five Israeli tourists and a Bulgarian bus driver last year.

The first alleged terrorist is identified as Meliad Farah, also known as Hussein Hussein, an Australian citizen born Nov. 5, 1980. The second is Hassan El Hajj Hassan, a Canadian citizen born March 22, 1988.

Canada's Immigration Minister Jason Kenney said in February that one of the suspects was born in Lebanon, came to Canada at age eight, became a Canadian citizen and then left at age 12.

Hassan El Hajj Hassan HANDOUT

"I understand he may have been back to Canada a few times since then, but he has not been a habitual resident in Canada since the age of 12," Kenney said.

Man's body left to rot in occupied home for years

Irish police say a dead man's badly decomposed remains have been found in an occupied Dublin house and may have lain there, undisturbed, for four years.

Police say the house's residents were illegal squatters and drug users.

They say the previous tenant may have died during a fire at the property in 2009, but his body was not seen by firefighters and eventually obscured by a broken piece of furniture.

Train likely derailed at double the speed limit

Spain derailment. Reason still unknown as authorities wait to question injured driver

A Spanish train that hurtled off the rails and smashed into a security wall was going so fast that carriages tumbled off the tracks like dominos, killing 80 people and maiming dozens more, according to eyewitness accounts and video footage obtained Thursday.

An Associated Press analysis suggests the train may have been travelling at twice the speed limit or more along that curved stretch of track.

Spain's government said two probes have been launched into Wednesday's derailment.

The regional government in Galicia confirmed that police planned to question the 52-year-old train driver, in hospital with unspecified injuries, as both a witness and as a possible suspect, but said possible faults in safety equipment were also being investigated.

Eyewitness accounts backed by security-camera footage suggested that the train was going too fast as it tried to turn beneath a road bridge. Spanish officials said the speed limit on that section of track is 80 km/h.

An Associated Press estimate of the train's speed using the time stamp of the video and the estimated distance between two pylons gives a range of 144-192 km/h. Another estimate calculated on the basis of the typical distance between railroad ties gives a range of 156-182 km/h. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Video game lets faithful blow Pussy Riot away

Grace invaders.
Players zap band members before they can enter a cathedral

A video game that allows players to kill members of the feminist punk-rock group Pussy Riot has been released online.

The game Don't Let Pussy Riot into the Cathedral was first unveiled at a recent Orthodox festival held in Moscow and is available on Russian flash game website gg-flash.ru.

Using their mouse, players control an Orthodox cross to zap cartoon drawings of Pussy Riot members before they can enter a church.

If too many Pussy Riot members enter, the building collapses and the game is over.

Maria Voskresenskaya, one of the game's creators, told Metro: "I can't judge Pussy Riot — do not judge and you will not be judged yourself — but I cannot approve of the act they've done. Such acts have no place in the Church. Even more so, politics should not (be) there."

BlackBerry plans to cut 250 positions at testing facility

Waterloo. Layoffs part of next stage of turnaround plan, company says

BlackBerry has given layoff notices to 250 workers at its product-testing facility in Waterloo, where the global smartphone company is based.

The employees, who supported the company's manufacturing, research and development efforts, were notified on Tuesday. "This is part of the next stage of our turnaround plan to increase efficiencies and scale our company correctly for new opportunities in mobile computing. We will be as transparent as possible as those plans evolve," the company said in an email.

The company announced plans last year to cut about 5,000 employees as part of its restructuring efforts.

BlackBerry shares fell below $10 earlier this month for the first time since last year. The company has been under pressure since it posted quarterly results last month that fell short of analysts' expectations.

At the company's annual general meeting this month, CEO Thorsten Heins told shareholders that BlackBerry is in the midst of a "complex transition" that included a three-stage plan to become profitable again.

Television. Survey highlights grim reality of job conditions

The market for reality television has exploded, with Canadian versions of The Amazing Race, Storage Wars, Big Brother and The Bachelor all competing for viewer attention.

But workers in the industry say they are being overlooked by some production companies intent on profits over the interests of their workers.

An exclusive first look by Torstar News Service at interim results of a survey taken by the Canadian Media Guild say workers complain that long hours, lack of security and benefits are some of the big issues that need to be addressed in the burgeoning industry.

"Factual TV is the new frontier and the business has really grown, which is great. But the downside to this is some workers who are saying that they've given their blood, sweat and tears in an industry that is open to abuse," says Karen Wirsig of the Canadian Media Guild.

The union decided to conduct a survey after being approached by reality TV workers about working conditions, Wirsig says. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

1 Humble beginnings. As the Duchess of Cambridge pushed forth the fruit of the royal loom, global media granted her highness a rare modicum of privacy, foregoing details regarding distress of her sovereign regions or straining of the royal bosom. Nay, but whilst the revelation of the imperial moniker, George Alexander Louis, stirred such zeal amidst the multitudes, I reflected thusly to myself: "Why am I still watching this?"

2 Politics. British Prime Minister David Cameron announced a novel endeavour to filter out Internet pornography for his citizens. After all, everyone knows that most of the salacious content that appears on-screen arrives unsolicited and if not for Cameron, this material would continue to present itself to innocent husbands, boyfriends and teenagers. Well cheerio, good sir. And good luck getting re-elected.

3 Sext-posed. In 2011, a sexting scandal forced Anthony Weiner to resign from U.S. Congress. Now running for mayor of New York City, he's still sexting, but refuses to withdraw his candidacy. After all, his wife remains staunchly by his side saying, "Yes, he's made mistakes, but he's apologized. Sure, he made them again repeatedly, but I love him. Besides how do you think we met?"

4 Got it. Selena Gomez turned 21 this week and celebrated by legally having her first alcoholic drink. More importantly, every adult male that has seen Gomez's video Come And Get It, can now officially stop feeling dirty.

5 Bynes some time. Amanda Bynes is being held for mental evaluation after allegedly starting a fire in a California resident's driveway. Oh, so now a few nasty tweets, one little hit-and-run, bong out a window, shave your head, wear a crazy wig to court, start a small fire in the driveway, and suddenly you're crazy?

6 Who's coming? Scientists at Imperial College London have designed a concept mission to land astronauts on Mars. There has been news of other such missions over the last year, making me wonder why the major world governments keep telling us that global warming is not that big an issue, but seem to be fervently searching for other options. Here's the scary part: They'll use our tax dollars in the name of progress, but you know they're not taking all of us, right?

7 Fine-tuning. Last week, two men walked out with Toronto General Hospital's baby grand piano at one o'clock in the afternoon. I don't have much to add except that I once got caught stealing a candy from the bulk bin while shopping at Loblaws.

8 This week in 1996. The Spice Girls scored their first U.K. No. 1 with Wannabe. It would sell more than six million copies and win an award for best British-written single. "So tell me what you want, what you really really want. I wanna really, really wanna zig-a-zig-ah." Best-written single indeed.

9 Take a bow. This week saw the untimely end of character actor Dennis Farina. Farina, who played cops and criminals alike, actually worked as a Chicago police officer for 18 years. Some will remember him from Law & Order, and others from films like Get Shorty and Saving Private Ryan, but to me, he'll always be Cousin Avy from Snatch. Rest in peace, bubbeleh, we'll miss you.

Giant cockerel takes its perch

A gargantuan electric blue cockerel has been unveiled on a plinth in London's most iconic city square. Hahn/Cock, a 4.72-metre-high fibreglass sculpture by German artist Katharina Fritsch, is perched next to sombre military monuments in Trafalgar Square and is meant to symbolize regeneration and rebirth. METRO

Double meaning

- The sculpture's title "hahn," German for "cock," carries the same double meaning as in English and is a deliberate double entendre.
- It mimics the Gallic rooster, the unofficial national symbol of France, yet is placed on a square that commemorates Britain's 1805 Battle of Trafalgar, a naval victory over France.

Artist's viewpoint

"I am making an image of a male animal. Women are getting more and more into the active role, they determine things, they make their way."

German sculptor Katharina Fritsch

Tough critics

"It's very ugly – a massive eye-sore. But that's modern art for you, something big and controversial — but I would like to try and climb up the cockerel."

Synopsis

Brandy Klark (Aubrey Plaza) is an overachiever. She's the publisher of her own magazine, Women With a Y, a straight-A student with a full scholarship to Georgetown University and her high school valedictorian. She's also a virgin, a status she hopes to change soon with the help of Rusty Waters (Scott Porter), a college surfer stud. Attacking her new project with the gusto that won her accolades in school, she gets the advice of friends and family (Christopher Mintz-Plasse, Alia Shawkat, Sarah Steele and Rachel Bilson) and makes up a sex "to do" list, applying the zeal that made her a mathlete.

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Let's talk about sex

The To Do List. Teen sex comedy genre gets a gender twist as the female becomes the hunter looking for bedpost notches

Richard: Mark, if you're of the generation familiar with Snackwells and skorts, then this movie may resonate a little louder for you than it did for me. It's a cleverly drawn coming-of-age picture, set in 1993, that gets the tone of the times right — skorts and all — but it left me feeling as though I was watching a throwback to the sex comedies of the early '90s filtered through a 2013 lens. In other words, less innocence, more bodily fluids. What did you think?

Mark: One of the things I love about movies is how much you can learn from them. Richard, I had no idea how tough it is for an attractive young woman to lose her virginity! Well, live and loin. Switching the gender roles and making the teenage girl the aggressor was a nice touch, and setting it in 1993 made its pre-Internet sexuality seem almost believable. It's John Hughes with an R rating — not a bad thing. What did you think of Aubrey Plaza?

RC: I like Aubrey Plaza. I think if this part had been played by anyone else — imagine Emma Stone or Imogen Poots — it would have lost some of its charm. Plaza is naturally off balance, so the stranger moments of this movie don't feel forced or quirky for the sake of being quirky. As I said earlier, I didn't much go for some of the bodily fluid gags — or the gross Caddyshack tribute — but Plaza trying to vamp it up in an ill-fitting bathing suit is a really funny scene.

MB: I liked Aubrey Plaza too. She was just gawky enough to make the movie seem credible. In fact, the whole movie is well cast. Bill Hader has lots of great moments, and Plaza's two girlfriends are not the typical cuties you usually find in a teen picture. I actually think there's another influence working on this picture — Napoleon Dynamite. From the Idaho setting to the oversaturated colours, quirky rhythms and simple cinematography, there's a lot the two movies have in common, although this one seems more overtly commercial.

RC: Maybe more commercial, but telling the story from a female point of view is a nice change from the usual boy-centric sex comedy story.

MB: Richard, in spite of what some people may think, I am not, nor have I ever been, a teenage girl. But I found I could relate to the story, because although it takes place in 1993, it takes place in Boise, Idaho, which feels like 1973.

Computer Chess

Director. Andrew Bujalski

Stars. Wiley Wiggins, Myles Paige

If a movie about geeky software programmers involved in a weekend tournament of Computer Chess sounds boring, the latest comedy from indie filmmaker Andrew Bujalski will do little to alter your assumption. Shot on vintage cameras in fuzzy black and white, Bujalski at least nails a lo-fi esthetic and the campy setting of the 1980s, but incredibly dull technical discussion between computer nerds does not make for a terribly exciting cinematic experience no matter how you look at it.

Mussels in Love

Director. Willemiek Kluijfhout

The Dutch/Belgian documentary Mussels in Love is a tasty and entertaining little bouillabaisse with a pinch of Leviathan, a dash of Kama Sutra, a sprinkle of Wall Street and The Mouse That Roared. The Netherlands and Belgium are locked in a heated, ancient competition over their shared national dish — the humble but sexy mussel. Who can produce the most, by which method, who can cook them best and who is the best trader? This seaside soap opera is moody, dramatic, poignant, funny and downright sensual.

Director. David Schultz

Stars. Rory J. Saper, David James Elliott, Kelly Rowan

In Rufus, a mysterious teenager shows up in a small town and tries to start a new life. Only problem is he's more than 100 years old and likes his steak a little too rare. David Schultz's brooding film stars mesmerizing newcomer Rory J. Saper as Rufus, a vampire with growing pains who's just trying to juggle a girlfriend, family and thirst for blood without blowing his cover. Despite the occasional teenage melodrama, Rufus' surprisingly relatable vampire is a refreshing take on the genre. MANORI RAVINDRAN

Crystal Fairy

Director. Sebastian Silva

Stars. Michael Cera, Gaby Hoffman

There isn't much to be gleaned from Crystal Fairy unless you're entranced by Michael Cera playing a caustic, compulsive jerk. Set in Chile, the drug-fixated tourist sets out with an American hippie and three locals to find a famed cactus in order to experience a hallucinogenic trip in the desert. And that's about it. Crystal Fairy is neither all that funny nor insightful and if not for some decent heavily-improvised performances, it wouldn't be worth the trip at all.

Fruitvale Station

Director. Ryan Coogler

Stars. Michael B. Jordan, Octavia Spencer

Don't be fooled, Fruitvale Station is a horror story — pure and simple. The true tale of Oscar Grant (a 22-year-old father fatally shot by transit cops on New Year's Day in 2009), this drama delivers a gripping examination of meaningless tragedy. Although a few coincidences seem oddly cooked-up by budding filmmaker Ryan Coogler, captivating performances and the impending doom makes this movie a mesmerizing — albeit tough — 85 minutes to sit through.

Confined in a small car with her family, the astute 10-year-old's discreet observations of her parents, who plan to split up after the trip, is as impressive as the arid Chilean landscape.

The Venice Syndrome

Director. Andreas Pichler

Despite the tens of thousands of tourists that crowd the canals of Venice by day, at night the storied city is deserted. Only 58,000 people now live in Venice and thousands leave every year. The Venice Syndrome briefly explores the reasons for the city's decline, but doesn't delve deeply into any of them. Instead, the doc follows a few nostalgic Venetians as they lament what's become of their city and pine for the past. A few hard facts and figures could have transformed this ode to the good old days into a more substantial film.

This may be the sixth time Hugh Jackman has moussed up his pointy mane to play the eponymous comic-book character but this latest version shows The Wolverine still has claws. Summoned to Japan by a dying, rich old friend, Wolverine winds up protecting an heiress from deadly yakuza, a toxin-spitting mutant and a (rather disappointing) giant samurai robot. Ridiculous as that sounds, The Wolverine's more crafty sequences (especially atop a speeding bullet train) help amplify the action's unravelling tone.

Oh mama! Gosling emasculated in film

When it comes to conjuring up the most mean-spirited insults a mother could hurl at her son, leave it to Ryan Gosling.

In his latest film, Only God Forgives, the Canadian actor plays a drug-smuggling mama's boy. In one scene, his character is humiliated by his mother at dinner after he brings a hooker, posing as his girlfriend, to meet mom — played by Kristin Scott Thomas.

Gosling said the embarrassments heaped on his character — including comments about his anatomical shortcomings — weren't originally in the script.

"She had to emasculate me and so she asked me to help, which I thought was funny. We just worked together and I told her all the things that she could say to me that would be sort of castrating," Gosling said, smiling. "She has that whole crazy rant."

The actress said while it was fun to play the villainous character, the darkness in her soul was "debilitating and wears you down."

And then there's the dinner scene.

"All I can remember was there was these huge pages and pages of words, and some of them were very, very difficult to say," Scott Thomas said. "He (Gosling) came up with that dialogue, believe me."

Was dark role a factor in actor's death?

Cory Monteith. Glee star wanted to tap into the troubles of his youth in his final film role — a young junkie on the run from police

KATE WEBB
kate.webb@metronews.ca

A screen shot from Cory Monteith's last film, McCanick, in which he plays a junkie on the run from police. CONTRIBUTED

Cory Monteith's fatal relapse into heroin addiction might have been triggered by his last film role — that of a hustling drug addict — speculates a source close to the actor.

The insider, who spoke to Metro on condition of anonymity, said Monteith's death bears a lot of similarities to that of Heath Ledger, who died of a prescription pill overdose months after becoming consumed by his Oscar-winning role as the insane Joker in The Dark Night.

Monteith portrayed Simon Weeks, a young junkie on the run from police, in McCanick, which was shot over three weeks in Philadelphia last September.

"It may or may not have put another step in this," says the source, who knew Monteith for most of his life.

McCanick's director, Josh C. Waller, told the Los Angeles Times after Monteith's sudden death that the Glee star had actively pursued the dark role, saying he wanted to "tap into things from his youth that he hadn't been able to use as an actor yet."

By March, Monteith's Glee castmates realized he was using and staged an intervention, prompting him to enter rehab in April for a month.

The actor's associate says it's hard to know for sure whether his role as a hard-core addict could have reignited his real-life addiction, which Monteith openly admitted to struggling with since his teens.

"That's the thing. If you do any acting or you do any acting classes, you get involved. You try to literally put yourself in their shoes," he says, "and it does help if you find a character within the character and you become that, so it's not really acting. You're just being."

Waller told the Times he last saw Monteith a month ago, when they met to watch a finished cut of McCanick.

The film does not yet have a distributor, but it has been submitted for consideration to the Toronto Film Festival.

In an interview on a Philadelphia radio show during its filming last September, the director praised the 31-year-old's passion for the role, which was a stark contrast to his more innocent and widely known character, Finn Hudson, on Glee.

"I've got to say, on Cory's behalf, his commitment to this role is really different than anything I've certainly seen him do, and it's been amazing to watch him do this," Waller said.

Monteith died alone in a Vancouver hotel room July 13 after consuming a toxic combination of heroin and alcohol.

The man behind the Sharknado masterpiece

#Sharknado. OK, the movie might not win best picture, but it became a campy classic thanks in part to writer Thunder Levin

ALEXANDRA CAVALLO
Metro World News in New York City

Ian Ziering, second left, and Cassie Scerbo battle a shark in the Syfy original film Sharknado. The network is announcing a sequel to Sharknado, which became an instant campy classic. The new film premieres in 2014. CONTRIBUTED

If you have a television and a Twitter account, and you're not aware of the bizarre phenomenon that is Sharknado, then we can only imagine that you were in a temporary coma when the movie premiered on Syfy last week.

For those of you who have only recently re-joined the waking world (welcome back!) here's a quick primer: Sharknado is a movie about a freak tropical storm that somehow sucks man-eating sharks out of the ocean, whipping them into a cyclone of dead eyes and sharp teeth, and depositing them in downtown Los Angeles. Sharks, in a tornado. That's about the extent of it — it is somewhat brilliant in its absurd (so absurd) simplicity.

When Sharknado premiered, people lost their freaking minds. Twitter almost imploded, with #Sharknado generating about 5,000 tweets per minute over the course of a few hours. Because, dudes, Sharknado. We caught up with the man who wrote the damn thing, Thunder Levin, to ask, a few pertinent questions.

OK, how the hell did you come up with the idea for a movie ... about sharks ... in a tornado. Take me through the process.
I'm sorry to say the initial idea didn't come from me. I had been involved with a couple of films for The Asylum (the company that produces a lot of the Syfy movies) and they came to me and asked me to write a movie for them called Shark Storm, but it was going to be a fairly straight disaster movie and it didn't really interest me. Then, about a month later, they came back and asked me to write something called Sharknato. At least that's what I thought they said. I couldn't understand why the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would be battling sharks. But they explained, "No, Sharknado. As in a tornado filled with sharks!" They gave me a half page of notes and I said, "This is the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard of and, as long as I can write it that way, I'm in!" The concept came to them from Syfy, who apparently had received a pitch with that title from Anthony Ferrante. So the whole thing came full circle when I, in perhaps my dumbest career move ever, withdrew from directing the film and Anthony was hired to make it.

Did you have any idea the kind of phenomenon this thing would be?
Of course not. Who could have imagined all this?! I thought it would be a fun movie that people would have fun with. And once I saw the poster and tagline last November, and realized that the marketing of the film would tap into the same sense of fun I'd tried to put in the script, I thought we had a good chance to do fairly well. But I don't think anyone could have predicted the explosion that occurred. It's just been unbelievable.

Did you see Snakes on a Plane? All the Sharknado buzz reminds me of when that movie first came out.
EXACTLY! I was at opening night of Snakes on a Plane and it was like a party in the theatre. People were yelling out lines of dialogue and talking to the characters and throwing popcorn at the screen! It was one of the best experiences I've had in a movie theatre (even though I usually hate it when people talk during a movie!). And I think what happened last Thursday night with Sharknado was the Internet equivalent of that.

Were you following #Sharknado on Twitter when the movie premiered? People were losing it.
Yes, I was part of the live tweet that the Asylum had scheduled with some of the people behind the movie. The organized tweetcast got completely overwhelmed by the huge public response. I'd look down to type a tweet and by the time I looked back up at the screen a couple of seconds later another 200 tweets would have come in. It was crazy.

Do you think that, from here on out, you will always be known as the guy responsible for Sharknado?
I guess that will be both my blessing and my curse.

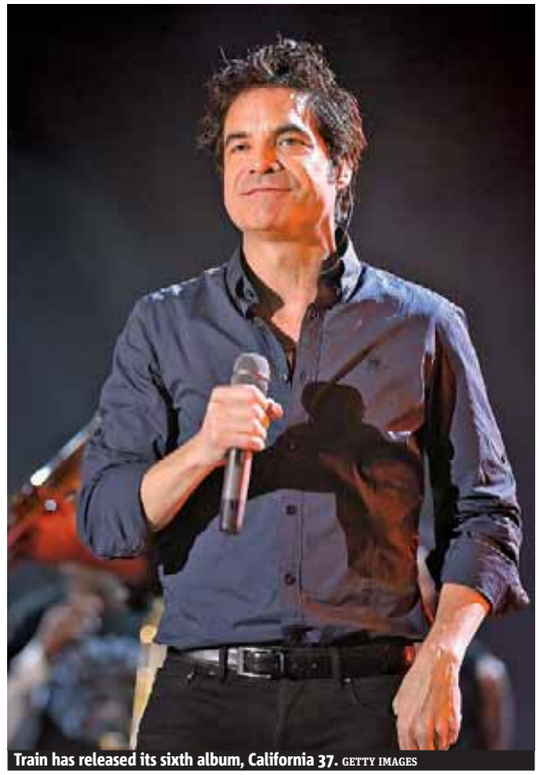
When we spoke to Pat Monahan, the lead singer of Train, he was in Chicago, getting ready to depart for New York — by tour bus, unfortunately, not train — as part of a tour in support of its sixth studio album, California 37. We hitched a ride on Monahan's train of thought.

There must be nothing like playing Jones Beach in the summer.
This is one of the highlights of our career. The whole Long Island area — my friend Theresa Caputo, who is the Long Island Medium, those are, like, my people. Those are the people I feel most connected with.

Wait, the Long Island Medium is your friend?
Yeah. My daughter was (one day) like, "I gotta watch my show, Dad, I gotta hang up." I was like, "You're too young to have a show." She told me what it was, and I found it on YouTube and cried for about four hours watching it. ... (Caputo) came to see us in Central Park last summer, and we've become friends since then.

We hear fans have been dressing the part for your Mermaids of Alcatraz tour.
People are just having a lot of fun with it. I remember reading a tweet like two months ago and this guy was like, "You're telling your fans to dress up as mermaids? Dude, you've really sold out." And my response was, "Dude, we sold out 15 years ago." (Laughs). Because it's just like, who cares? If you don't want to have fun with us then don't come.



Train has released its sixth album, California 37. GETTY IMAGES

You recently said that this is the happiest you've been on tour.
Yeah, it is. Last summer, I was struggling with losing my voice, and my father had just passed away prior to the tour, and I hadn't really had a break in many years, so I started the tour kinda depressed. ... A few months ago, a chiropractor read my chart. ... He said at our age, our adrenal gland is basically depleted, and our adrenal gland is what handles stress. So, here I am, I lost my dad, and that was like the straw that broke the whole back, I guess. I didn't know where to put my stress so it all started to go to my vocal chords. So he put me on a supplement to help kick start my adrenal gland, and gave me an adjustment, and I have not had vocal problems since. That's part of the joy — I don't have to come out and worry if I can sing.

Ancient Radiohead, Sirvana and The Groupies resurfaced on the web this week

Lemming Trail/ Radiohead

In 1986, a new Oxford, U.K., band called On a Friday issued a nine-track demo cassette. Now that band is called Radiohead, and a copy of the cassette is expected to fetch big bucks at an auction in September.

Get Back/ Sirvana

When Paul McCartney played Seattle last week, he invited some special guests to the stage: Dave Grohl, Krist Novoselic and former Nirvana sideman Pat Smear. You call this Nirvana reunion "Sirvana," apparently. Magic.

The Groupies/ Er, some groupies

In 1969, a record featuring nothing but interviews with woman interested in sleeping with rock stars hit the stores. Fascinating cultural anthropology.

Gomez won't give press the reaction they crave

New album. In addition to declining to talk about Bieber, pop star won't rule out whether this will be her last musical effort

Selena Gomez. GETTY IMAGES

While her on-again, off-again beau Justin Bieber has made a sport of angrily antagonizing the ever-present paparazzi, Selena Gomez rarely seems in danger of losing her poise amid the prying gaze of tabloid photographers.

But it's not because she condones their behaviour.

"I don't really want to give them what they want, you know?" the 21-year-old singer with the long, dark chocolate locks said in a recent interview. "I don't agree with it (and) I don't like it. I want to go to the grocery store and hang out with my friends at the movies and not be bothered by grown men with cameras — that's awkward.

"But at the same time, it's a part of what I have to do and I have to sacrifice that, I guess. I just try to keep my head down because I know exactly what they want. They want a reaction and I don't want to give it to them."

Indeed, the Disney-reared star always seemed especially calm in contrast to Bieber's perpetual storm — not that she'd talk about that, of course. Journalists were strictly forbidden from mentioning the Stratford, Ont., pop star's name in the interview, a point mentioned several times then punctuated by the hulking body guard positioned by the hotel-room door.

Gomez, we're told, only wants to talk about Stars Dance, her fourth album overall and first without the backing band the Scene. And potentially her last.

She's not discounting a return to recording in the future, but seems more intrigued by her future as an actress.

"This (music) industry's so fickle, you can't trust it — one day you're good, the next day you're gone. So that's the tricky part," she said. "I've been telling people that this might be my last record for a while." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Amanda Bynes' folks aim to legally step in and save their daughter from herself

Amanda Bynes' parents, Rick and Lynn Bynes, are heading to court to request a temporary conservatorship of their troubled daughter, according to Radar Online. "Her parents will both be petitioning to be the temporary proposed conservators and want control of her personal and financial affairs," a source says, adding that Rick and Lynn "are hopeful that the judge will take into consideration that she tried to start a fire in a stranger's driveway and burned her pants in the process. Her behaviour is completely unpredictable and she needs long-term mental health help."

Bristling Baldwin gives shamed Weiner a hard time

Alec Baldwin is no Anthony Weiner fan. The former 30 Rock Star is calling for the scandal-prone New York City mayoral candidate to withdraw from the race after it was revealed Weiner resumed his habit of sexually explicit online conversations with women other than his wife after a similar scandal forced him to resign from Congress in 2011. "Weiner has only one problem that disqualifies him from the race and that is that he is clearly addicted to reckless behaviour," Baldwin writes in an opinion piece for the Huffington Post. "Weiner should quit, walk away, let some time wash over his reversals and re-emerge, another day, to attempt some future race for public office."

Liquid Assets

Past Portugal's fortified sips

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
liquidassets@eastlink.ca

Portugal's reputation as the world's premier fortified winemaker hasn't done it any favours when it comes to promoting its other wines.

Port is polarizing, and I've been asked more than once if all Portuguese wines have spirit added.

The country has been making non-fortified reds, whites, rosés and sparklings for centuries. None see a drop of spirit and all would get a lot more attention if it wasn't for their Spanish neighbours hogging all the Iberian Peninsula limelight.

Like all warmer climate countries, Portugal knows its way around a refreshing wine and Vinho Verde (or green wine) is its classic warm weather white. Though the northern region that shares its name makes other colours, it's the chillable white version that the locals reach for when temperatures rise.

Made from an eclectic blend of indigenous fruit, the Gazela Vinho Verde ($8.30 to $12.49) is a relaxed, citrusy thirst-quencher with a light lemony body, forward acidity and a zesty hint of fizz.

Served well chilled, or even over ice, it works amazingly well with summery dishes like barbecued chicken, shellfish and salads as well as fresh fruit and creamy goat cheese.

PRICES REFLECT THE RANGE ACROSS THE COUNTRY. SOME PRODUCTS MAY NOT BE AVAILABLE IN ALL PROVINCES.

The anatomy of grilled cheese

When you were a child, you thought like a child: grilled cheese sandwiches were made from slices of Velveeta melted between slices of skillet-toasted white bread. Now that you are an adult, it's time to update the sandwich for a more grown-up palate.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS/ W. WAYT GIBBS, EDITOR-IN-CHIEF OF THE COOKING LAB, THE CULINARY RESEARCH TEAM LED BY NATHAN MYHRVOLD

Bread

Begin by using better bread. In place of the squishy white stuff, try something with more substance: thickly-cut slabs of flavourful sourdough, sweet brioche or crunchy baguette.

Gooeyness

Next, add interesting texture or flavours to the filling. Thin slices of sweet apple and jalapenos complement sourdough slices. The brioche makes a delicious breakfast or brunch when stuffed with sliced ham, sautéed mushrooms and a fried egg. A baguette yields a bruschetta-like grilled cheese sandwich when dressed with fresh basil leaves, pesto and tomato confit.

Texture

You can use the fanciest, stinkiest, crumbliest cheese if you borrow a trick from food scientists at Kraft. Flip over a box of Velveeta and you'll find, among other ingredients, the reason it melts so uniformly: sodium citrate. This white, crystalline ingredient is a salt of citric acid. Buy sodium citrate at some brewer supply stores or order it online. Just dissolve 11 grams of sodium citrate into 1 1/8 cups (265 mm) of milk or water over medium heat, bring to a simmer, and gradually whisk in 285 grams of finely grated cheese (3 to 4 cups). As the cheese melts, the sodium citrate serves as an emulsifier and prevents the fat from splitting off to form a greasy slick on top. If possible, weigh the cheese because volumes can vary with the kind of cheese and fineness of grating.

Aged White Cheddar on Sourdough with Apples

For the cheese slices:
- 3 tsp (14 g) sodium citrate
- 1/2 cup (115 mm) water
- 6 cups (380 g) aged white cheddar cheese, grated

For the sandwich:
- 8 slices sourdough bread, 1/2 inch thick
- 8 very thin slices apple
- 3 tbsp(30 g) thinly sliced jalapenos

Lightly oil a baking sheet and heat it in an oven set to its lower temperature.

In saucepan over medium heat, dissolve sodium citrate in water, then bring to simmer. Add grated cheese to simmering water a handful at a time while whisking until all of the cheese is completely melted.

Pour the melted cheese onto warmed baking sheet. Tip sheet back and forth to form single layer of even thickness. Cover cheese layer with plastic wrap, and place in the refrigerator until set, about 2 hours. Slice cheese into pieces.

When ready to prepare the sandwiches, heat a large, heavy skillet over medium.

Butter outward-facing sides of each bread slice, assemble sandwiches, each with slice of cheese, slice of apple and bit of jalapenos. Add a sandwich to the skillet and pan-fry until the bread is golden brown and the cheese is melted, 2 to 3 minutes per side. Repeat with remaining sandwiches.

Blue Jays' Buehrle shuts down Astros

All it took to end the Toronto Blue Jays' losing streak was a visit from the lowly Houston Astros.

Starter Mark Buehrle pitched a two-hit shutout and the Blue Jays' offence came up big in timely situations to beat the Astros 4-0 Thursday night at Rogers Centre. It was their first victory since July 13, and it snapped a seven-game skid.

Earlier in the day, the Jays announced that Brandon Morrow has an entrapped radial nerve that will keep him from throwing for the next six weeks, effectively ending the right-hander's season.

Fragile Federer falls early on home turf

Roger Federer slumped to a stunning defeat against No. 55 Daniel Brands in the Swiss Open second round Thursday, his third straight exit against a low-ranked opponent. The German right-hander won 6-3, 6-4 in just 65 minutes.

"I wasn't consistent enough, in the end," Federer said. "He was serving well and I couldn't do enough with my return."

Golf. Field can't catch up to leader after he posts a 7-under 65 in morning round

Even though half the field had yet to play on Thursday, the first round of the 2013 RBC Canadian Open was largely decided by noon.

Brendan Steele held on to his early clubhouse lead to win the first round of the Canadian Open after shooting a 7-under 65, with no golfer in the afternoon grouping able to crack the top five of the $5.6-million PGA Tour event in Oakville.

Joe Affrunti came closest. His 4-under 68 performance tied him for seventh.

"Today was probably the most complete round that I've had all year, so that was kind of nice," Steele said. "Didn't miss many greens, didn't hit many shots off line and I was able to roll a few putts in."

The 30-year-old Steele played consistent golf over the par-72, 7,253-yard Glen Abbey Golf Course, bogeying only the par-4 ninth hole. Steele had eight birdies, five on the front nine alone.

Scott Gardiner, Matt Kuchar and Scott Brown all tied for second, one shot off the pace.

Gardiner was tied for first after a birdie on the par-3 15th hole, but he bogeyed on the next hole to drop back into a tie with Kuchar and Brown.

"Actually, didn't hit that bad a drive on 16, and went left and got stuck behind a tree and had to lay up," Gardiner said. "And then I hit a pretty good (shot), I missed a four-foot putt. That was a struggle, but the rest of the shots I was fairly happy with. But then a couple of the tee shots there on the last."

Ottawa's Brad Fritsch was the top Canadian after a 3-under 69 performance. He birdied his final three holes to pass David Hearn of Brantford, Ont., on the leaderboard. Hearn finished 2 under.

NHL. Time of the essence with Leafs' Nonis extension

These Maple Leafs were built in Brian Burke's image of truculence and grit. Six months after taking over as general manager, Dave Nonis hasn't drastically overhauled the roster.

But the moves he has made so far were enough to earn Nonis a five-year contract extension that gives him some long-term security.

"We all know that there's no short-term fixes in professional sports," Nonis said in a radio interview on Sportsnet 590. "If you're thinking short term you're probably going to do long-term damage."

That's the directive to Nonis and Raptors GM Masai Ujiri by Maple Leafs Sports & Entertainment president and CEO Tim Leiweke, who was with the Los Angeles Kings when they won their first Stanley Cup. Leiweke's message has been about the future, and in extending Nonis he gave the 47-year-old the keys to the kingdom.

"This extension will allow David the time to build his kind of team to produce steady results, year after year," Leiweke said in a statement. "Everyone is excited about his ability and grasp of the NHL landscape and today's new contract agreement will offer the Leafs consistency and a long-term vision."

Ambitious as the next GM

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Take care of your health today because you could easily overdo it. That applies to social activities, especially. By all means have fun but respect your limits. Yes, you do have them, just like everyone else.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
Why are you afraid to ask for advice? Maybe it's because you fear you will be told the one thing you don't want to hear. The point is it's the one thing you most need to hear.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
Even Geminis have days when their emotions get the better of them and this may be one for you. Whatever others may say or do, you are advised to take none of it seriously.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
You may be flattered by someone's attention but are they being sincere? According to the planets, they may be buttering you up because there is something they want from you. Find out what it is.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
There is one more obstacle you need to find a way past before you are free to chart a new course. It does not matter how you deal with it so long as you make a choice and stick to it.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
Try not to come on too strong, either in your personal life or at work, because people may take it the wrong way. You know how much you hate being told what to do. Well, they feel that way too.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
You may wish that someone would be more careful about the company they keep but you must not be too forceful about it. If you insist they steer clear, they will most likely do the opposite just to spite you.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
No one is following you and no one is planning to trip you up. So why do you feel this way? Maybe it's just your guilty conscience — again.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Sometimes you can impose your will on others but it won't be so easy today. In fact, the more you try to tell others what to do, the more they will do something different.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
You may be tempted to disappear for a while, to leave the mad world behind you, but the planets say you should stay right where you are and do something decisive. Running never solves any problem.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Do something practical to help a friend in need but draw the line at giving them money. They may mean it when they promise to pay you back soon but the planets warn they may not be able to.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
A friend is feeling low and needs some kind words. Who better than Pisces to say the right things? Remind them why life is always worth living — and while you're at it remind yourself. SALLY BROMPTON
